Apacer launches USB 2.0 Flash Drive AH225

By NCN News Network

Apacer Technology Inc has announced the release of its USB 2.0 Flash Drive AH225 that organizes those all-too-often runaway office notes with its magnetic cap providing a memo stand function. The unique AH225 can be used like a fridge magnet, so users can stick it to the side of a metallic PC, desk or shelf. Plus it can be placed on a desk to hold a memo or business card. The cap can be pushed onto the tail end of the USB Drive while it's in use, preventing its loss. Its unique transparent colored cap and simple circular design not only creates a whole new look but adds flair to your environment at work, school, or at home.

According to Apacer's Product Director, C.K. Chang, "Apacer has differentiated itself again as it has created the AH225 USB flash drive which adds more than just ordinary storage functionality, it's breakthrough design achieves decisive organization." The AH225 USB flash drive puts a different spin on office organization because it not only offers the valuable storage for digital files but also places critical information in one easy-to-find location with its magnetic cap. It's unique memo stand function posts office memos to any magnetized office partition. The special transparent caps can also intakes and holds up memos with a built-in crevice along it ridge. In addition, the rounded magnetic with transparent cap really sends out a stylish and refreshing message about you. The AH225 is both a memo organizer and a storage device that fits into your digital lifestyle and is easily taken with in your pocket, purse or handbag. The new design has let the AH225 won 2007 Japanese G-Mark Award.

The AH225 comes in a flexible range of memory configurations including 512MB/1GB/2GB/4GB. Additionally a green LED indicator flashes during USB detection and data transmission. The flash drive fully supports "plug&play" hot swapping as well as USB 2.0 high speed file transfers.
